The air we breathe:

Improving air quality at European, national and local level

Thursday 28 November 2019, 19.30-21.00

Justi's Hall, Primatial Palace, Bratislava

While air quality has improved across the European Union over the past decades, air quality problems persist. To curb air pollution, collaboration across sectors and at all levels – European, national and local – must be maintained and fostered. The event will provide insights into the current state of air quality in Europe and explore what these findings mean for us.

Panellists:

Daniel Calleja Crespo | Director-General, Directorate-General for Environment, European Commission

Norbert Kurilla | State Secretary, Ministry of Environment of the Slovak Republic

Hans Bruyninckx | Executive Director, European Environment Agency

Tatiana Kratochvílová | Deputy Mayor, City of Bratislava

Dana Mareková | Lawyer and environmental activist

Moderated by:

Milan Chrenko | Director-General, Directorate for Environmental Policy, European Union and International Relations, Ministry of Environment of the Slovak Republic
